

GET KIDS CURIOUS ABOUT TRAVEL

Get your kids (of all ages) curious about the jungles, rainforests, savannas, oceans, rivers, lakes, streams, wildlife, mountains, and people from around the world. Travel can open their minds and help them to expand their horizons beyond their front and back yard. Travel Rules!

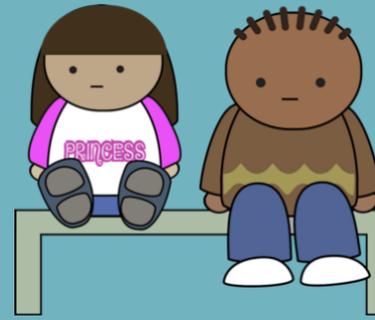

1 BECOME AMBASSADORS

Whether kids travel around the world or throughout their country, they can become ambassadors for goodwill. Kids are naturally curious. They can share with other kids about their homeland. This is a great way for children from around the world to learn about other each other and their cultures.

2 MEET NEW FRIENDS

Most kids find it easy to make new friends. Why? Because they're open to getting to know others, even if they're different from them. Kids can make new friends and keep in contact with them under the guidance of their parents.

3 SEE BODIES OF WATER

About 71 percent of the Earth's surface is water-covered. Oceans account for 96.5 percent of all Earth's water. Kids, under parental supervision, can explore lakes, rivers, streams, and oceans. They can also learn about conservation efforts of the Earth's water.

4 SEE VARIOUS LANDSCAPES

Landscapes vary around the world, from dry deserts to lush forests. When you travel as a family, try to see different landscapes. For example, maybe your family will explore the jungles of Costa Rica. Or maybe visit Colorado in the winter. And like water, landscapes need conserving too.

5 SEE WILDLIFE

Most kids love animals; it's important that kids know and understand that they need to respect them. Kids can learn about wildlife (and endangered species) at designated parks or even on an African Safari. They can also learn how to help animals in need.

6 SPEAK A FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Why not have kids learn a foreign language? When they travel to a foreign country, let's say France, they'll be able to converse with their peers. Plus, it's a great skill to have for the future. Employers often ask if candidates can speak a different language.

7 LEARN AND GROW

Travel can teach kids many things, from confidence to negotiation skills (some cultures expect you to negotiate when buying goods), navigation skills, intuitive skills, and more. These and other benefits of travel will help your kids to learn and grow.

8 EXPLORE, EXPLORE, EXPLORE

Not only can exploring the world give kids the opportunity to see ancient sites, but it can give them a different perspective about other cultures from around the world. Let them make up their own minds about what they hear at school or read online. Have open and honest communication!
